NOKOMIS CEMETERY

(Formerly known as JESSE KNIGHT MEMORIAL CEMETERY)
 (East of U S 41 and across the railroad tracks on Colonia Lane, Nokomis)

Jesse Knight, with his wife Rebecca, came to the Venice area in 1886 accompanied by their children and 300 head of cattle. As the area grew, the need for a school was realized by Knight and he donated a one acre site for the school; which also served the early settlers as a church on Sundays. Many of the services were conducted by Knight who was an unordained Methodist minister.

As the community grew, Knight saw the need for a separate church building and on 22 October 1903 he donated a half acre for the church building and one acre for the cemetery plot. While owned by Knight, this site had served as a cemetery since the 1880's when the area was known as Venice. In 1904 the cemetery was known as the Venice Cemetery and the church was known as Knight's Chapel. This was the first cemetery in the Venice area and is owned and maintained by the Venice-Nokomis United Methodist Church. The first burial was on 3 August 1888.

As the community grew, Knight saw the need for a separate church building and on 22 October 1903 he donated a half acre for the church building and one acre for the cemetery plot. While owned by Knight, this site had served as a cemetery since the 1880's when the area was known as Venice. In 1904 the cemetery was known as the Venice Cemetery and the church was known as Knight's Chapel. This was the first cemetery in the Venice area and is owned and maintained by the Venice-Nokomis United Methodist Church. The first burial was on 3 August 1888.
