

Tombstone Inscriptions from Dunleckney Cemetery, County Carlow, Ireland

Compiled by "The Bagenalstown Youth Works" under the foremanship of John Doran, of Cummins Park, in 1985. [This was a government sponsored youth employment project, the inexperience of the people copying these inscriptions should be kept in mind when trying to interpret some of the obviously erroneous entries. It is supposed that the majority of entries are quite accurate and hence worth publishing here.]

Catherine Newton daughter of Philip and Sarah Newton died the 28th of Nov 1800 aged not fourteen. Nevertheless it may not be an unprofitable lesson to say something of her disposition which was a ready cheerful unremitted wish to be of use; and she industriously contrived to be so, oftener than anybody could expect. Particulary to her grandfather, who through Gratitude and Justice here declares that he believes she was the best child he ever knew except her mother, they united in making life even desireable to him tho labouring under great infirmaty the loss of such a one will be felt as long as we have feelings, but the Recollection of every action and Expression of hers from the time she began to have sence to her last hour, gives us confidence to trust that she is happy.

Index to the Townlands of Ireland

Dunleckny Civil Parish, 7956 statute acres in the barony of Idrone East, Poor Law Union of Carlow and County of Carlow, encompassing these townlands:

Ballymoon, Ballynakill, Ballywilliamroe, Boherduff, Bohermore, Carrig Beg, Carrig More, Carrigpark, Clonacur, Coolnapish, Curraghacruit, Dunleckny, Garryhill, Gormona, Kilcarrig, Kildreenagh, Labanasigh, Moneybeg, Rathduff, Seskinryan and Toberbride, as well as the Town of Bagenalstown. [Ed. note: Bagenalstown is now called Muine Bheag which sometimes appears in older records as Moneybeg or Moonbeg.]

Lewis's Topographical Dictionary of Ireland:

BAGNALSTOWN, a post-town, in the parish of Dunleckney, barony of Idrone East, County of Carlow, and province of Leinster, 8 miles (S.) from Carlow and 49 miles (S.S.W.) from Dublin; containing 1315 inhabitants. This town is beautifully situated on the rive Barrow, and on one of the mail coach roads from Dublin to Kilkenny; it is a place of considerable trade, and is rapidly rising into importance; there are some extensive corn-mills. It has a patent for two fairs, and ten other fairs have been lately established by the proprietors. Quarter sessions are held here in Jan., April, July, and October. Petty sessions are held every Monday; and there is a manorial court, but no seneschal is at present appointed. Here is a station of the constabulary police. The court-house is a handsome building in the Grecian style, in front of which is a portico with four Doric pillars. There is also a large and handsome R.C. chapel, and a dispensary.

DUNLECKNEY, a parish, in the barony of Idrone East, county of Carlow, and province of Leinster, on the road from Carlow to Burrishkeigh; containing with the post-town of Bagenalstown, 4217 inhabitants. This place, which is situated on the river Barrow, was anciently the seat of the Kavanaghs, Kings of Leinster; and in 1300 a preceptory of Knights Templars was founded here, which continued only till 1308, when it was suppressed. It was also the residence of the Bagenal family from the 16th to the 18th century, and is at present the property of Walter Newton, Esq. In 1545, a battle took place at Ballynakill, near Garry hill, in this parish, between the Kavanaghs of the latter place and those of Folmonty, in which, after 100 on each side were slain, the former were victorious and secured possession of the territory which was the object of their contention. The parish comprises 7751 statute acres, as apportioned under the tithe act; the land is good and the system of agriculture in an improved state. Limestone abounds and is quarried for agricultural purposes, and there are quarries of fine granite, which is used for building: the Barrow is navigable to Waterford. The principal seats are Dunleckney, that of W. Newton, Esq.; Bagenalstown House, of Miss Newton; Garry Hill House, of Viscount Duncannon; the Lodge, of Mrs. Weld; Rathwade House, of B. B. Norton, Esq.; Lodge Mills, of S. Crosthwaite, Esq.; and Clonburrin, of W. B. Cooke, Esq. The manufacture of starch is carried on, and there is an extensive malting concern in the parish belonging to Mr. Crosthwaite; fairs and petty sessions are held at Bagenalstown. The living is a vicarage, in the diocese of Leighlin, united in 1795 to that of Agha, and in the patronage of A. Weldon, Esq., who is impropiator of the rectory. The tithes amount to 830 pounds, 15 shillings and 4 and 1/2 pence, of which 553 pounds, 16 shillings and 11 pence is payable to the impropiator, and 276 pounds, 18 shillings and 5 and 1/2 pence to the vicar; and the vicarial tithes of the union, to 415 pounds, 7 shillings, 8 and 1/4 pence. The glebe-house is a neat residence; the glebe comprises 10 acres. The church is a small edifice, and has been recently repaired. In the R.C. divisions the parish is the head of a union or district called Bagenalstown, comprising also part of the parishes of Agha, Fenagh, and Slyguff. The chapel, a handsome edifice lately erected at an expense of 2,000 pounds, is situated at Bagenalstown; and there are chapels also at Newtown and Ballinkillen, and places of worship for Wesleyan Methodists and Walkerites. The parochial school-house, a neat building in the Grecian style, is in Bagenalstown, where also is a handsome court-house, in the same style, lately erected at the expense of Philip Bagenal, Esq., in which quarter sessions are held at the usual periods. Besides the parochial school, there are two private schools in the town. The side walls and gables of the old parish church are still remaining in the churchyard; the interior was lighted by narrow lancet-shaped windows. At Ballymoon are the ruins of the castle of the preceptory of the Knights Templars; the walls, which are 8 feet in thickness and 30 in height, enclose a square of 130 feet, flanked by four square towers, and having a gateway entrance on the west side.
