VOLUM E 39 ISSUE 1 JANUARY – FEBRUARY 2014

A Note from Our President

Hello Everyone,

Well the tree is down and everything is put away and here we are in 2014! As many of you know that we lost Patricia Lacy to cancer December 08, 2013. She will be missed by many. She believed in getting involved and doing the best Job she could which was about 150%. Her celebration of Life at Cornerstone United Methodist Church shared her love of being a servant to others. The statement "Because it is what I like to do" rang so true to who she was. The joy she received From doing genealogy and research was who she was. We will miss you friend.

Jodi Wright is working on speakers for the upcoming year. I hope you will enjoy and learn more skills to aide in your own research.

Conference time will be here soon. We will add the list to the newsletter for you to check out and put them also on the website.

We want to add something new to the newsletter this year with a member's corner where members will share what they are doing in genealogy.

Phyllis Crawford, President

Next Meeting February 08, 2014

February's Presidents

George Washington was born on February 22, 1732, in Westmoreland County, Virginia. Washington served as a general and commander-in-chief of the colonial armies during the American Revolution, and later became the first president of the United States, serving from 1789 to 1797. He died on December 14, 1799, in Mount Vernon, Virginia.

Early Life and Family

George Washington could trace his family's presence in North America to his great-grandfather, John Washington, who migrated from England to Virginia. The family held some distinction in England and was granted land by Henry VIII. Much of the family's wealth was lost during the Puritan revolution and in 1657 George's grandfather, Lawrence Washington, migrated to Virginia. Little information is available about the family in North America until George's father, Augustine, who was born in 1694.

Augustine Washington was an ambitious man who acquired land and slaves, built mills, and grew tobacco. For a time, he had an interest in opening iron mines. He married his first wife, Jane Butler and they had three children. Jane died in 1729 and Augustine married Mary Ball in 1731. George was the eldest of Augustine and Mary's six children, all of which survived into adulthood. The family lived on Pope's Creek in Westmoreland County, Virginia. They were moderately prosperous members of Virginia's "middling class."

Little is known about George Washington's childhood, which fostered many of the fables later biographers manufactured to fill in the gap. Among these are the stories that Washington threw a silver dollar across the Potomac and after chopping down his father's prize cherry tree, he openly confessed to the crime. It is known that from age seven to fifteen, George was home schooled and studied with the local church sexton and later a schoolmaster in practical math, geography, Latin and the English classics. But much of the knowledge he would use the rest of his life was through his acquaintance with backwoodsmen and the plantation foreman. By his early teens, he had mastered growing tobacco, stock raising and surveying.

George Washington's father died when he was 11 and he became the ward of his half-brother, Lawrence, who gave him a good upbringing. Lawrence had inherited the family's Little Hunting Creek Plantation and married Anne Fairfax, the daughter of Colonel William Fairfax, patriarch of the well to do Fairfax family. Under her tutorage, George was schooled in the finer aspects of colonial culture.

In 1748, when he was 16, George traveled with a surveying party plotting land in Virginia's western territory. The following year aided by Lord Fairfax, Washington received an appointment as official surveyor of Culpeper County.

Lincoln's Childhood

Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in Hardin County, Kentucky to Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks Lincoln. Thomas was a strong and determined pioneer who found a moderate level of prosperity and was well respected in the community. The couple had two other children: Abraham's older sister Sarah and younger brother Thomas, who died in infancy. Due to a land dispute, the Lincolns were forced to move from Kentucky to Perry County, Indiana in 1817, where the family "squatted" on public land to scrap out a living in a crude shelter, hunting game and farming a small plot. Thomas was eventually able to buy the land.

When young Abraham was 9 years old his mother died of tremetol (milk sickness) at age 34 and the event was devastating on him. The 9-year-old Abraham grew more alienated from his father and quietly resented the hard work placed on him at an early age. A few months after Nancy's death, Thomas married Sarah Bush Johnston, a Kentucky widow with three children of her own. She was a strong and affectionate woman with whom Abraham quickly bonded. Though both his parents were most likely illiterate, Sarah encouraged Abraham to read. It was while growing into manhood that he received his formal education—an estimated total of 18 months—a few days or weeks at a time. Reading material was in short supply in the Indiana wilderness. Neighbors recalled how Abraham would walk for miles to borrow a book. He undoubtedly read the family Bible and probably other popular books at that time such as Robinson Crusoe, Pilgrims Progress and Aesop's Fables.

Law Career

In March, 1830, the family again migrated, this time to Macon County, Illinois. When his father moved the family again to Coles County, 22-year-old Abraham Lincoln struck out on this own, making a living in manual labor. At six feet four inches tall, Lincoln was rawboned and lanky, but muscular and physically strong. He spoke with a backwoods twang and walked with a long-striding gait. He was known for his skill in wielding an ax and early on made a living splitting wood for fire and rail fencing. Young Lincoln eventually migrated to the small community of New Salem, Illinois where over a period of years he worked as a shopkeeper, postmaster, and eventually general store owner. It was here that Lincoln, working with the public, acquired social skills and honed story-telling talent that made him popular with the locals.

Samson, Clifton R., Sr, 80, passed away peacefully on June 25th 2013 in Capistrano Beach, CA. Clifton was born in Lucasville, OH on March 2, 1933 to Clifton and Dorothy (Rockwell) Samson. The oldest of 3 children (sister, Nancy and brother, John), Clifton grew up in Ohio, living most of his young life in Eaton. Clifton graduated from Eaton High School, where he starred on the school's football team as a quarterback and on the basketball team. A gifted student, after graduating from high school, Clifton earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Engineering from the Lowell's Technological Institute in 1955, and a Master's degree in Meteorology from the University of Michigan in 1965.

After college, Clifton proudly served in the United States

Air Force, ultimately reaching the rank of Major. In addition to being stationed at Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, OH, Stewart AFB in NY and RAF Station in Bentwaters, England, Clifton also served a tour in Viet Nam, stationed at the Tan Son Nhut Air Base in Pleiku AB from April 1963 through May 1964. During this tour of duty, Clifton provided weather forecasts and briefings in support of air and ground military operations. After Viet Nam, Clifton served at USAF Solar Observing and Forecasting Location in Los Angeles, CA. Clifton was honorably discharged from active duty in 1968. Following his military career, Clifton taught mathematics for over a decade at Washington High School and Carson High School. Clifton eventually returned to federal service, working as a Mechanical Engineer for the United States Navy at the Point Mugu Naval Air Station. As an engineer, Clifton helped develop and improve air launched missile systems, including the Harpoon. Clifton retired from federal service in the late 1990s.

While in college at Lowell Tech, Clifton met and fell in love with a beautiful coed, Marion Paul. The two married and lived a long happy life together. Clifton and Marion were loving parents to four children, Clifton, Jr., Roberta Jane, Jennifer and John, and loving grandparents to nine grandchildren. Clifton taught his many values, including love, patience, integrity, commitment and faith in God. Because of his loving guidance, Clifton's children have in turn become good parents and successful parents. Clifton had a sharp mind and a quick wit. He love to walk, to read and to play chess. Always an avid sports fan, Clifton enjoyed watching games, and rooting for the Big-10, especially the Ohio State Buckeyes and the Michigan Wolverines. Clifton has passed on his athletic ability to his children and grandchildren, each of whom have demonstrated skill in their own favorite sports and athletic activities.

Clifton was preceded in death by his parents and his loving wife, Marion. Clifton is survived by his sister and brother; four children; and nine grandchildren. He will be interred at St. Andrews by the Sea.

Have We Lost Access to the SSDI?

Michael Leclerc's Genealogy News

08 Jan 2014

There has been a great deal of talk in the last few weeks about the Social Security Death Index. That the U.S. Congress finally decided to pass a law and it had such an impact on us as genealogists was bad enough, but to do it in a rush at the end of the year has left many people with some confusion around what did and did not occur. While much has been written, I thought I would take a stab at my understanding. I'm certain my friends and colleagues will let me know if I have misunderstood anything.

What happened in December?

As part of the process to pass a budget for this year, both houses of Congress included a section that closes public access to the SSDI for three years after a death occurs. The terms went into effect on January 1.

Does that mean that I can no longer access the SSDI?

No, that is not what it means. It means that, at least for now, deaths added to the SSDI will not be publicly accessible until three years have passed (e.g., deaths in 2014 will be available in 2017.

So no one can access the SSDI for three years?

There is an exception carved out for those who need to access it for legal reasons. The exact method of access, and who will be allowed to access it and why, have yet to be determined. Those are regulations that will be worked out over the coming months.

So now we cannot access any records after 2011?

No. The law was not made retroactive, it started on January 1, 2014. Those records will be available in 2017. But the last three years have been made public, and as far as we know are not subject to closure. Mocavo has no intention of removing any records from our version of SSDI. That said, we will not be able to add any more records until 2017.

In summary, for the most part the impact will not be major for the vast majority of genealogists. It will make things more challenging for a time as we see how the new regulations are implemented. But, for the vast majority of people it is not the worst thing in the world to have to wait a few years to access information. Most states have limits on access to birth, marriage, and death records already. This is only one more restriction. It is our hope that the forensic genealogists who need access to the SSDI will be able to have access under the exception carved out by Congress.

We must, however, be vigilant. We cannot allow more records to be closed. Especially in the clumsy way that the SSDI was closed. The purported reason for closing access is to prevent identity theft, but it stands no chance of doing that. It is the Social Security Administration that must do more to work with agencies to verify deaths to prevent identity theft.

Imagine a World Without Cyndi's List, FindAGrave & NEHGS

Michael J. Leclerc's Genealogy News
16 Jan 2014

This week federal courts dealt a serious blow to Net Neutrality. There has barely been news coverage about this, but let me assure you, it is one of the most serious issues of our time. And as a genealogist, you should be incredibly concerned about it. Because, unless something changes, your ability to research is about to be seriously curtailed. Imagine if you had to do your research without Cyndi's List; Linkpendium; Ancestry.com; Mocavo; MyHeritage; FamilySearch; Find a Grave; NEHGS, NYGB, NGS, or any other genealogical society; or Eastman's Online Genealogical Newsletter. That is the future we are facing.

So what is this confusing topic of Net Neutrality?

One of the basic precepts of the internet has been equal access for all. No matter how large or small your company or your web presence, your ability to reach customers was the same as everyone else.

This week federal courts ruled that current FCC rules maintaining Net Neutrality are illegal. What does this mean?

It means that internet service providers (ISPs)can now charge whatever they want for access. They are also free to make deals with individual companies to provide "fast" access to their website, while dropping other websites to such a crawl that one would not be able to properly use them. This will give these large companies the ability to shut out other websites.

This will limit the ability of new organizations to come along and introduce new products. No one would be able to see them. They would not have the opportunity to grow. Cyndi's List started with a single page of links and now has millions of links to valuable sites around the world. Find a Grave was just a few transcriptions. Who doesn't go there looking for death information? Even Ancestry.com started as a small website and grew.

And what about genealogical societies? How many of them have local records and resource information available online? They would never be able to pay the extortionate charges that ISPs would charge.

Imagine a world where the internet is run by the cable companies. You can only access websites by paying them a fee. Much like cable fees now, you could have access to certain low-value websites for a small fee, but have to pay much larger fees to access others. And they control what you can, and cannot, see.

All of this is quite preventable. But we need to let people know how much we support Net Neutrality. The FCC can write new rules, classifying ISPs the same way they classify telephone companies, forcing them to provide equal access to all, and limiting what they can charge. Visti FCC.gov and let them know what you think. Contact your representative and senators also and let them know. You can also contact your state representatives and senators to let them know your feelings on this issue, and press them to institute legislation as well. Read more about Net Neutrality on CNN.
