A Note From The Editor

Hello Members,

I apologize for any information / queries / updates / corrections, etc., that have been submitted for this edition of SCCOGS News which have not been included. My poor computer was just so old and tired that it couldn't take anymore and died on me, taking all of the information I had with it. I was lucky enough to borrow a computer to complete this edition of the newsletter. It's great to have good friends who trust you with their electronics!

With that being said, may I remind you again that SCCOGS is in need of a newsletter editor and webmaster. Please?! The newsletters do not have to be in this style, they may be laid out anyway you like and you may use any word processing program of your choice to do them. Let's be honest, the newsletter and web page need "fresh eyes" and someone who can devote more time and energy to them than I have been. And now that my computer is toast, it would be a great time for a "fresh pair of eyes and fingers" to take over. If you are interested in either of these positions, or both of them, please contact one of the officers listed on page 2.

PBS Announces New Series, GENEALOGY ROADSHOW, Premiering This Fall

ARLINGTON, VA; – PBS announced that it will add the new series GENEALOGY ROADSHOW to its fall lineup. Part detective story, part emotional journey, GENEALOGY ROADSHOW will combine history and science to uncover the fascinating stories of diverse Americans. Each individual's past will link to a larger community history, revealing the rich cultural tapestry of America. GENEALOGY ROADSHOW will air Mondays, September 23-October 14, 9:00-10:00 p.m. ET.

“GENEALOGY ROADSHOW is an engaging, innovative program that reveals the bigger picture of our nation's past, present and future,” said Beth Hoppe, Chief Programming Executive and General Manager of General Audience Programming for PBS. “With a diverse mix of stories in each episode, GENEALOGY ROADSHOW appeals to Americans interested in learning about their family histories. It also shows that no matter one's heritage and background, everyone has a place in history.”

GENEALOGY ROADSHOW's premiere season will feature participants from four American cities — Nashville, Austin, Detroit and San Francisco — who want to explore unverified genealogical claims, passed down through family history, that may (or may not) connect them to an event or a historical figure. These cities were chosen as American crossroads of culture, diversity, industry and history, with deep pools of potential participants and stories. After participants are chosen, experts in genealogy, history and DNA will use family heirlooms, letters, pictures, historical documents and other clues to hunt down more information. These experts will enlist the help of local historians to add color and context to the investigations, ensuring every artifact and every name becomes a clue in solving the mystery. Residents of Austin, Detroit, Nashville and San Francisco are invited and encouraged to submit their personal stories as GENEALOGY ROADSHOW will unearth family and community secrets, reveal notable relatives and discover unexpected stories that connect the past to the present. Many answers will be revealed on camera before a local audience, in a historic building relevant to the cities' – and the participants' – histories.

“It is rare and wonderful when one can produce a show in which literally everyone is qualified to be a part of it,” said executive producer Stuart Krasnow. “PBS is the perfect partner to produce a show that celebrates the richness of the individual, and the differences between us that make our country unique.”

THE GENEALOGY ROADSHOW has been a hit in Ireland, where national public broadcaster RTE commissioned the original format from producer Big Mountain Productions. “It just hit a nerve,” said Big Mountain executive producer Philip McGovern. “Everybody wants answers to questions about their own histories to help make sense of their lives today. We've had a lot of interest in the format internationally and are delighted PBS has picked it up.”

Episodes in the series include:

NASHVILLE

Nashville is a vibrant cultural crossroad in the American South. While it is the capital of country music and a centerpiece of Civil War history, it's known for much more. The city rose to prominence within the shipping industry, and its post-Civil War prosperity led to an explosion in architecture, education and the arts. Its abundant opportunities led to population swells of Mexican, Cambodian and Iraqi immigrants. Nashville's Jewish community laid roots in the area more than 150 years ago, and an influx of Kurdish immigrants in recent years has given the city its new nickname, “Little Kurdistan.”

AUSTIN

With the motto “Keep Austin Weird,” this city prides itself on uniqueness. The fast-growing metropolis has evolved into a hub for government, technology, culture and education. Austin boasts a strong sense of individuality that stems in part from its diverse history. With early Native-American settlements of Tonkawas and Comanches, central Texas' rich culture includes Mexican, Asian, African-American and European communities.

DETROIT

While Detroit is known mainly for two things — cars and Motown — there is much more to the city, which boasts one of the most diverse populations in the country. After its settlement by French-Canadians, Detroit attracted a large number of Europeans and immigrants of Middle Eastern descent, making it now home to the largest Arab-American community in the country. As well, hundreds of thousands of African-Americans moved to Detroit from the rural southern U.S. as part of The Great Migration of the 20th century. Detroit was the first place in the country to have a stretch of concrete highway and a four-way, three-color traffic light. It supplied 75 percent of the liquor during the Prohibition era and was the birthplace of the ice cream soda.

SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco is known as a Pacific port, a religious mission, a railroad hub, a mining mecca, an earthquake epicenter, the birthplace of world-famous counterculture movements and the home of the biggest technological innovations of all time, including denim jeans. The city has seen its population transformed over and over again due to its constantly shifting industries, leading to the significant diversity that exists there today.

The shooting is said to have grown out of the whisky-selling case in which Dr. NORTHRUP appeared as one of the prosecuting witnesses, and for doing which the Haverhill people and the MCCOYS swore vengeance on him.

St. Louis Post Dispatch

Description: GRANT as a Lover.

Date: March 16 1882

Newspaper published in: St. Louis, MO
(From the Keokuk Constitution.)

Hearing that there was a lady living in this city who had once been courted by Gen. U. S. GRANT and who had refused her hand in early womanhood to this noted American civil and military character, a Constitution reporter sought an interview with the lady, with very satisfactory results. The newspaper representative found the early sweetheart of Gen. GRANT to be a lady considerably advanced in years, yet still large, active and buoyant and not nearly so reticent as the General. She had not seen General GRANT since the '50s, she said, and then his father carried on a tannery in Portsmouth, Ohio. She once had occasion to reside for a time in the family of a farmer whose farm joined that of GRANT's father - only a line of fence between - and it was during her stay at this farm house that she was courted by Gen. GRANT. It must have been in the spring time, for she says she and GRANT would meet at the division fence, on each side of which were beautiful flowers.

"Ulick," said she, "would say to me, 'Let's gather flowers and see who will have the most kinds when we get through.'"

"You mean GRANT when you say 'Ulick?'" interrupted the reporter; "his name is Ulysses."

"Yes," she replied, "we always called him 'Ulick,' and while he was courting me and wanted to marry me my father used to laugh at him and plague me, saying 'He is the greenest-looking boy I ever saw,'" and, chuckling to herself, she added, "and he was a green-looking fellow. I remember the last time I saw 'Ulick.' We had been buggy-riding. We had alighted from the buggy and he stood leaning with one arm on the wheel of the vehicle and looking into my face he said: 'Well, Ellen (my name is Eleanor, but they called me Ellen), if I ever find anybody that I love well enough to marry and I am so fortunate as to have a daughter, you know what the daughter's name will be.' The daughter's name is Nellie, a pretty contraction of Eleanor.

"We shall not publish your name," said the representative, "since you have been so kind and courteous to us, without permission. Can we use your name?" Finally she remarked: "I am not ashamed of my father's name; it was Charles BRANDON, and my maiden name was Eleanor BRANDON. My first husband's name was John SPAULDING. Further than this I will not go."

Genealogy Research in Military Records

How can Military Records help in my genealogy research?

Military records can often provide valuable information on the veteran, as well as on all members of the family. For example:

Compiled Service Records:

Compiled service records consist of an envelope containing card abstracts taken from muster rolls, returns, pay vouchers, and other records. They will provide you with your ancestor's rank, unit, date mustered in and mustered out, basic biographical information, medical information, and military information.

Pension Applications and Pension Payment Records:

The National Archives also has pension applications and records of pension payments for veterans, their widows, and other heirs. The pension records in the National Archives Building in Washington, D.C. are based on service in the armed forces of the United States between 1775 and 1916. Pension application files usually provide the most genealogical information. These files often contain supporting documents such as: narratives of events during service, marriage certificates, birth records, death certificates, pages from family Bibles, family letters, depositions of witnesses, affidavits, discharge papers and other supporting papers.

Bounty Land:

Bounty land warrant application files relate to claims based on wartime service between 1775 and March 3, 1855. If your ancestor served in the Revolutionary War, War of 1812, early Indian Wars, or the Mexican War, a search of these records may be worthwhile. Bounty land records often contain documents similar to those in pension files, with lots of genealogical information. Many of the bounty land application files relating to Revolutionary War and War of 1812 service have been combined with the pension files.

How do I begin?

There is no simple explanation for how to begin research in military records. Your research path will depend on aspects such as: what branch of service your ancestor was in, which conflict, what dates, whether Regular Army or a volunteer unit, whether your ancestor was an officer or enlisted personnel, and whether there was a pension application.

The approach to researching records of enlisted men and women, officers, and for the different branches of the military is described in this article: An Overview of Records at the National Archives Relating to Military Service. <http://www.archives.gov/publications/prologue/2002/fall/military-records-overview.html>

Compiled Military Service Records for Volunteers:

When researching volunteers who served in the military for a particular war, start with the compiled military service records. Begin by searching the appropriate name indexes on the National Archives microfilm. If the compiled military service records have not been reproduced on microfilm, researchers may request to see the original records at the National Archives Building in Washington, D.C.

Regular Army:

Since the War Department did not compile military service records for those who served in the Regular Army, start your research with:

Enlisted Men - Regular Army Enlistment Papers, 1798-1894

Officers - Francis B. Heitman's Historical Register Dictionary of the United States Army, From Its Organization, September 29, 1789, to March 2, 1903 (2 vols)

Bounty Land :

Many of the bounty land application files relating to Revolutionary War and War of 1812 service have been combined with the pension files. There is also a series of unindexed bounty land warrant applications based on service between 1812 and 1855, which includes disapproved applications based on Revolutionary War service. This series is arranged alphabetically by name of veteran.

<http://www.archives.gov/research/military/genealogy.html>

Determine if your ancestor served in the military

The first step in searching for the military records of an ancestor is to determine when and where the soldier served, as well as their military branch, rank and/or unit. Clues to an ancestor's military service may be found in the following records:

- Family stories
- Photographs
- Census records
- Newspaper clippings
- Journals, diaries & correspondence
- Death records & obituaries
- Local histories
- Grave markers

Description: Sensational Shooting Scene. Attempted Suicide of Gus Beumlar at the "Red Light."

Date: August 2 1879

Newspaper published in: Portsmouth

Portsmouth Times, August 2, 1879

Sensational Shooting Scene.

Attempted Suicide of Gus Beumlar at the "Red Light."

Last Thursday night, Gus Beumlar, a bartender of the City Saloon, on Market street, and son of Henry Beumlar, who keeps a boarding house on Front street, attempted suicide at the "Red Light," or City beer garden, corner of Eight and Chillicothe streets, last Thursday night at about nine o'clock, by shooting himself above the right temple with a Colt's revolver of 22 caliber. Young Beumlar had been dissipating rather freely and becoming miffed at his parents, as his father says, because he would not advance him money, had bade his parents farewell Thursday evening before supper, saying he never intended to return. He informed several others that it was the last time they would see him alive, and bade some of them farewell. He had been paying his attentions to Miss Minnie Asche, daughter of Wm. Asche, proprietor of the City beer garden, and called there about seven o'clock, and with Miss Asche promenaded through the city for about an hour. Returning he had a drink or two of wine, and while Mrs. Asche, and the daughter were in the garden, he went into the sitting room and after writing a note or two he deliberately drew the weapon from his pocket, and placing the muzzle against his head fired, the ball making a dangerous wound.

The shot alarmed the family, Mr. Asche ran into the room and took the smoking revolver from his hand disrobed him and fixed him as comfortably as possible until surgical aid was summoned, but he would not permit an operation.

Yesterday noon Beumlar was taken home, where at three o'clock a TIMES reported found him suffering great pain from the wound, and remorse for the rash act which he said was done while under the influence of liquor. He was anxious to have the ball removed and expressed a desire to recover. In his pockets was found a note couched in language something like the following: "Dear Parents—This is your fault and you know it. Good by, Gus"

On the other side he had written: "Dear Brother—I have $50 in my truck. The key is in my pants pocket. Get it. I make you a present of it."

Young Beumler is in his 20th year, and obtained the revolver from a drawer in his father's saloon, on Market street, the weapon belong to Mr. Baumler's agent, Wm. Egbert, who has charge of the saloon, and Gus had been frequently told not to disturb it. The rash act has been a severe blow to his mother who is in very poor health, sad troubles his aged father very much.

An interview with Minnie Asche developed that fact that her escort had not magnified to her his intention to commit suicide. Mr. Asche states that he opposed Beumler's attentions to his daughter which may partly explain the matter.

LATER.

Yesterday at four o'clock a surgeon, [we could mention the fact that it was Dr. C. M. Finch, but some of the Medical Societies hold that a newspaper has no right to publish the news—and we will not do so] removed the ball, which was imbedded nearly an inch deep, and flattened out on the right temporal bone, the external table of the latter being fractured. The surgeon gave the patient to understand that his condition was extremely critical if he did not keep quiet for ten days to two weeks. The wound is more serous that was first supposed.

Description: Backfield Ace of Tech Team Married
