The Southland, Volume XI,
a Waco, Texas publication of February 1903

(The Southland Volume XI issue is a historically important 32 page publication primarily devoted to Henderson County and its residents while also including the nearby town of Frankston in an adjacent county. It is believed that The Southland publishers produced this issue devoted to Henderson County because of the then important train commerce route of the Cotton Belt Railroad which ran through Henderson County on its way to Waco.)

(Note: Profiled residents are in bold and only the known Confederate veterans are identified.)
