Family History Tips

5 Ways to Get People To Share - We've all been there.

Tracked down a family bible only to learn that the distant cousin who possesses it won't let anyone else take a look. Or discovered a possible genealogical connection on the Internet only to find that your new "cousin" won't divulge their sources. Like any good story, however, there is more than one point of view.

As selfish as it may seem to you, there are any number of good reasons why an individual may be a bit wary of sharing their treasured family heirlooms or hard-earned genealogy research. The trick to encouraging these people to share is understanding their possible reservations and treating them in a polite and respectful manner.

1. Offer something in return.
2. Give credit where credit is due.
3. Do your homework before asking for help.
4. Make it personal.

5. Respect the privacy of living relatives.

Following Ancestors on the Move - Study the roads and routes that often brought people to your family's hometown. Follow them eastward to identify locales where your ancestors might've paused, then check census and other records in those places. Compare your family's arrival date in each place with timelines of possible routes they traveled. Consult histories of those routes and places, too: Even if they don't name our family, you'll get clues to how and from where settlers arrived in the area. ---FamilyTree Magazine, March 2008

Remember...

"When we put God first, all other things fall into their proper place or drop out of our lives. Our love of the Lord will govern the claims for our affection, the demands on our time, and the interests we pursue, and the order of our priorities."
