Family History Tips

Family History Games - In our FH Sunday School class we admitted that we don't always just do genealogy on our computers, confessing feeling guilty with time spent playing solitaire. But we also recognize that games do have a place. Children can learn with games. Here is one that can be harnessed for family history: Jigsaw Puzzle Lite from KraiSoft Entertainment. It is a free download. You can use it with your own family history pictures on your computer. It lets you pick different levels of difficulty (number of pieces, whether there are outlines on the board,...). Check it out! <http://www.kraisoft.com/puzzle-games/jigsaw/> This might be a good grandchildren activity. ---Damaris Fish , Central Point, Oregon

Six Ways to Shrink Your Chances for Success

- Misstep #1. Not learning how to use the tools we have.
- Misstep #2. Not questioning enough.
- Misstep #3. Not recording enough information.
- Misstep #4. Avoiding unfamiliar records.

- Misstep #5. Overlooking your local library and society.
- Misstep #6. Organizational issues.

Questions/Answers

Question: I found "Hamberghmaker" on a record of one of my ancestors. I assume it is his occupation. Do you know what it could be?
Answer: Hamberghmaker was a Horse collar maker

Question: I am trying to find a physical description a particular ancestor. What type of record might have that kind of information?

Answer: Depending on the time frame, I would try military records, naturalization, citizenship, emigration, Immigration, Biography or History .

Surname Queries

I will have the opportunity to travel to Poland this year and am interested in finding a relative. I am researching Frank Danielak who immigrated in 1899. In a census record it is written that he was born in Poland with Warsaw written above the word Poland. I am in hopes that I can find a father and mother of Frank from birth records and see if I can find where the parents were buried.

Can anyone give me some insight on where or how I might accomplish this task? Please contact Linda Wood at woodjl@teamwifi.net Remember...

Human beings look separate because you see them walking about separately. But then we are so made that we can see only the present moment. If we could see the past, then of course it would look different. For there was a time when every man was part of his mother, and (earlier still) part of his father as well, and when they were part of his grandparents.

If you could see humanity spread out in time, as God sees it, it would look like one single growing thing--rather like a very complicated tree. Every individual would appear connected with every other. ---- C. S. Lewis
